Inprint is a unique and wonderful literary nonprofit organization. They provide a space to integrate reading, literature and writing into your everyday life through carefully curated literary experiences where you can meet authors and ask questions.

We're inviting all medical students and residents to attend one or several Inprint readings for free—on a first come, first served basis. Each event will feature one or two renowned authors reading from and talking about their new books with a well-known writer. All fall readings will be conducted online via the Inprint “virtual studio,” while spring readings will be held online and in person (details to be announced).
