

Shawn Demmons

Shawn Demmons is a queer African American trans man committed to social and racial justice. Shawn has 10+ years of experience providing community health education trainings, and capacity building and technical assistance that increase provider knowledge and awareness about trans people and the best practices to engage transgender communities in health care.

Shawn has developed training curricula, webinars, other presentations, and provided TA for the staff and leadership of numerous health care organizations across the U.S. In addition, he coordinated the UCSF Center of Excellence for Transgender Health's National Transgender Health Summit in 2017 and 2019.

Currently, Shawn is the director of the Bay Area, North & Central Coast region of the Pacific AIDS Education & Training Center. Shawn has an undergraduate degree in Black Studies and a Masters in Public Health from San Francisco State University.
